

Ajilon Learning is now Interskill Learning

Alpharetta, GA (July 1, 2007) - Ajilon Learning, the world's premier provider of e-Learning solutions for the mainframe computing industry, today announced the completion of a management buy-out of the firm from its former parent company Adecco; and a return to the well known Interskill name.

"The name change back to Interskill Learning from Ajilon Learning draws upon significant name recognition in the legacy systems world," said Ian Rowlands, Interskill Learning's Chief Executive. "For twelve years before our recent Ajilon Group rebrand, the Interskill name was synonymous with mainframe education of the highest quality and currency."

"Completing this transaction marks the beginning of an exciting new chapter in Interskill's history," Rowlands said. "As an independent firm, we will tap the entrepreneurial spirit of officers and staff, delivering more innovative mainframe education solutions and offering a breadth, depth and currency of training not previously thought possible in the legacy systems arena."
